Equity Challenge Day 3: Is Racism Systematic?

Something to Consider:

"Americans believe in the reality of 'race' as a defined, indubitable feature of the natural world. Racism—the need to ascribe bone-deep features to people and then humiliate, reduce, and destroy them—inevitably follows from this inalterable condition. In this way, racism is rendered as the innocent daughter of Mother Nature, and one is left to deplore the Middle Passage or Trail of Tears the way one deplores an earthquake, a tornado, or any other phenomenon that can be cast as beyond the handiwork of men. But race is the child of racism, not the father."

- Ta-Nehisi Coates

The Levels of Racism

Going into day 3 of this challenge, we hope you have taken the opportunity to look inside yourself and expand your mind through the different challenges offered. Now prepare to shift from personal reflection to a broader view of racial equity and social justice.

SYSTEMIC Ongoing racial inequalities maintained by society. INSTITUTIONAL Discriminatory policies and practices within organizations and institutions. INTERPERSONAL Bigotry and biases shown between individuals through word and action. INTERNALIZED Race-based beliefs and feelings within individuals.

Are you seeing and addressing how racism operates at different levels? Dr. Camara Jones, Senior Fellow at the Morehouse School of Medicine, says that in order to address racism effectively, we have to understand how it operates at multiple levels. Often what people think of first and foremost is interpersonal racism. Only seeing this level means that we fail to see the full picture that keeps the system of racism in place.

Today's Challenge

Option 1: Check out this short video from Race Forward about the levels and the importance of looking at systemic, not simply individual, racism.

Option 2: Watch Dr. Jones' TED talk on the "Allegories on Race and Racism" where she shares four short stories to help us understand privilege and racism.

Option 3: Read a blog post by Cynthia Silva Parker, which gives an overview of four levels of racism and the need for a systemic approach to seeing and addressing oppression.
